Voyage Esbjerg, Denmark to Ferrol, Spain

The Anna was proceeding into Ferrol Bay, near San Cristovo when she grounded on rocks at the side of the channel, reportedly after suffering engine failure. The vessel was held at her bow but free floating at her stern and was positioned across the channel, although she was not blocking the passage of other vessels. Initial efforts to refloat the freighter, with the use of her main engines were unsuccessful and two local tugs had to be engaged to assist. With the rising tide and the power from the tugs the Anna was successfully refloated after three hours. She proceeded into Ferrol and is reportedly at anchor undergoing an inspection to assess the extent of the damage to her hull.
